Old Deerfield National Historic Landmark 1962: Historic Deerfield is located within The Old Deerfield National Historic Landmark encompassing 1000 acres of actively cultivated farmland in a valley between the Deerfield and Connecticut Rivers. Staff and Trustees from around the country work with local, regional and national agencies to preserve and protect the agricultural way of life in this beautiful village.

Physical Plant and Landscape: 12 museum houses, Flynt Center of Early New England Life (an exhibition and public storage facility), Henry N. Flynt Memorial Libraries, Deerfield Inn, Museum Store, and 37 other buildings on 104 acres in the original village. In all, the Old Deerfield National Historic Landmark counts the survival of 26 eighteenth-century houses, and 14 more that pre-date 1850, on their original sites with related archeology in a village that retains its original scale and town plan from the 1670s.

Museum and Collections: Historic Deerfield exhibits 12 houses dating from c1730 to 1872 and one of the top half-dozen collections of American decorative arts in the U.S., including more than 27,000 objects made or used in America from 1650 to 1900, with special interest in the history, art, and culture of Deerfield and the Connecticut River Valley and with significant collections of 18th and 19th-century American furniture; English and Chinese export ceramics; American silver; and American and English textiles and clothing. The Flynt Center of Early New England Life features changing exhibitions as well as "The Museum's Attic:" the study/storage of 2500 antiques, and a seminar room for workshops and lectures.

Libraries: The Memorial Libraries, open Tuesday through Friday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. (closed for the noon hour), include the 21,000 volume Henry N. Flynt Library of Historic Deerfield (reference works, microfilm and newspapers) and the printed books, manuscripts, diaries, ledgers, and related materials of the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association Library. The Memorial Libraries are the most comprehensive collection of materials relating to the history and material culture of Deerfield and the Connecticut River Valley. Students, scholars and the public are welcome. 413-775-7125
